Australian National University
DRAFT Reconciliation Action Plan: 2020–2021

Our vision for reconciliation

The University’s vision is to be a place that facilitates learning that respects and values diversity: a place where all Australians come together to engage with their chosen disciplines in culturally rich learning and research environments. We seek to embed reconciliation into our core business practices and decision making at all levels.

ANU is a place where First Nations cultures are respected, celebrated and reflected in our research and education. We are dedicated to advancing reconciliation by further promoting greater understanding of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures and histories; increasing participation in higher education; and fostering partnerships in Indigenous education, research, wellbeing, advancement and development. ANU will provide an environment for debating the big issues to advance the status, recognition and lives of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

For tens of thousands of years, hundreds of generations of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples have lived in Australia. These Traditional Owners and custodians of Australia have developed complex societies with many languages, cultural practices and religious and spiritual traditions, which continue to be passed down from generation to generation. The arrival of Europeans in Australia led to two centuries of conflict and violence. Through deliberate government policy First Nations peoples were isolated and marginalised within their own Country, resulting in significant economic and social disadvantage. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples are still fighting to maintain the languages and cultures which sustain First Australians’ way of life and have shown incredible strength and resilience in the face of disadvantage and discrimination.

Institutions like ANU benefit enormously from the opportunity to learn from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and cultures. The past two centuries of dispossession and systemic racism have profoundly impacted all aspects of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander life, including access to institutions like ANU. This is the legacy that ANU recognises, acknowledges and seeks to redress. This Plan is testament to the University’s conviction that it has an important role to play in righting these wrongs. It recognises that meaningful relationships must be founded on mutual respect and meaningful partnership between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and non-Indigenous Australians.

As the National University, we have a responsibility to ensure our student and staff cohorts represent the diversity of our nation. With this in mind, we strive to build a strong cohort of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff and students. Ensuring that Aboriginal and Torres Strait staff and students feel welcome, and are supported within a community on our campus are our top priorities. There are five core themes which this plan focuses upon:

Students: We will provide the best educational and campus experiences so that our Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students may successfully complete their degrees and fulfil their aspirations. Our students are the future leaders of our nation.

Staff: We will develop appropriate recruitment mechanisms and pathways for career progression and professional development to support our Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff to succeed in their chosen field by providing a stimulating, supportive, enriching environment and community of support at ANU.
Research & Policy Development: We seek to transform Australian society with impactful, collaborative, Indigenous-led research and policy development.

Education: We have so much to learn from the cultures, histories and practices of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and are committed to ensuring that an education at ANU celebrates and embeds First Nations knowledges, principles, and ways of learning.

Community Engagement: Our partnerships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples will provide the University with the opportunity to listen and learn about the historical and modern circumstances for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, and provide space for articulating a vision for the future.

Our business

ANU is Australia’s national university and a strategic endowment for our nation. It was established by an Act of the Parliament of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1946 to support the development of national unity and identity, to improve Australia’s understanding of itself and its neighbours, and to contribute to economic development and social cohesion. Since its establishment, ANU has built an international reputation for excellence in research and education and advancing knowledge through original inquiry and intellectual discourse. ANU undertakes research of the highest quality in fields of particular importance to the nation. The University is a leader in quality teaching and learning, and our profile of graduate destinations demonstrates that ANU prepares students well for workforce participation and for being valuable contributors locally, nationally and globally. With the multidisciplinary capacity created by the Colleges, ANU advances knowledge through community engagement by enhancing understanding of Australia – its economy, society, culture and environment – and its position in the region and the world. As the Commonwealth’s university in the nation’s capital, ANU plays a leading role in the public policy community by exploring the important problems and issues that confront the nation, the region and the world, working to provide solutions through evidence-based policy analysis and informing the public through leading open discussion of those issues. We want to be a university that brings together students and scholars from across the country, the region, the world, and from all social, cultural and economic backgrounds.

The University is located in central Canberra, with small facilities elsewhere in the ACT, New South Wales and the Northern Territory with regional offices in China, Singapore and the USA. The University employs approximately 4400 staff of which 51 identify as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander. A commitment by ANU to achieve the vision and targets set out in this RAP will enhance the quality, diversity and experience of the University's staff and student bodies. Embedding Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures and perspectives across all areas will help ensure that courses are more responsive to international, national, community and professional expectations.

ANU is fully committed to the values of academic inquiry in the pursuit of knowledge, integrity in all its activities, collegiality in its relationships, diversity in its staff and students and engagement with its communities and the nation. ANU is uniquely placed to contribute both to the national reconciliation agenda and to supporting the aspirations of local Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities. The University has a long-standing commitment to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander education and cultures, and has already taken a number of significant steps towards reconciliation.

The University has a number of organisational units with a singular Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander focus. The Tjabal Indigenous Higher Education Centre provides a meeting place and support base for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students studying at ANU. Tjabal staff and students are strongly committed to improving education outcomes and achieving study and career goals that positively impact communities.

Other areas of the University that have a strong Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander focus include:
- The National Centre for Indigenous Studies (NCIS) which promotes and initiates cross-disciplinary research in a wide range of areas of relevance to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. Through this research NCIS aims to deepen Australia's understanding of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures and histories and ensure these knowledges, perspectives and experiences are respected, valued, accessed and incorporated into all learning environments and beyond.

- The Centre for Aboriginal Economic Policy Research (CAEPR) is Australia's foremost social science research body focusing on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander economic and social policy from a national perspective. CAEPR aims to undertake social science research that informs intellectual understanding, public debate, policy formation and community action.

- The Australian Centre for Indigenous History conducts collaborative and individual research projects on Australian, comparative and transnational Indigenous histories. The Centre hosts the journal, Aboriginal History, which is co-edited by two staff members, and offers an undergraduate course on Indigenous histories.

- The National Centre for Indigenous Genomics aims to create a repository of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander biospecimens, genomic data and documents for research and other uses that benefit Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander donors, their communities and descendants, and the general Australian community.

- The National Centre for Epidemiology and Population Health includes a program in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health and Wellbeing.

- The ARC Centre of Excellence for the Dynamics of Language has a major focus on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander languages, supported by a Chair of Indigenous Linguistics. ANU students have the opportunity to learn an Aboriginal language.

- The School of Music's Indigenous composer initiative, in partnership with other arts organisations, provides mentoring for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander composers.

- The University has close relationships with the Australian Institute of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Studies and the National Museum of Australia, both located adjacent to the University.

Our RAP

The University's first RAP was launched in 2009 but by 2012, the central RAP Committee had ceased to function. The RAP Committees of some Colleges and administrative units continued to implement actions and made some very significant advances, particularly in trying new models for recruiting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander professional staff. In 2017, under the leadership of Vice-Chancellor Brian Schmidt and with the launch of our new strategic plan, ANU renewed its commitment to reconciliation through the development of an Innovate RAP. There have been many achievements in implementing our 2018-19 RAP, in particular a reinvigorated RAP Working Group which has driven action across all levels at ANU. The Working Group is chaired by the Vice-Chancellor and members include representatives from each of the Colleges and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander representatives including the Directors of Tjabal and NCIS.

Other achievements include beginning all major ANU public events with a Welcome to Country; the inclusion of an Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander person on high level decision-making bodies of the University including ANU Council; an enhanced Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander presence at graduation ceremonies, including flags and stoles for graduates; the ANU Indigenous Heritage Trail; the establishment of staff Reconciliation awards; implementation of the Core cultural learning program for staff and students; and an increase in the number of artworks and symbols displayed across the University. A number of these actions have helped to establish a sense of place and belonging across our campus. We still have a long way to go to reach our goals of parity in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff and student numbers however there is enormous goodwill across our community to continue our work towards reconciliation.

In developing this current plan we explored the challenges of the previous plan, including committing to too many actions and deliverables without the required support, communication and resources, and have thus refocussed on five key priorities, while maintaining a list of our ongoing commitments. The plan has been developed by our RAP Working Group, led by the Vice-Chancellor, in consultation with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff and students and academic and administrative units of the University. The RAP Working Group is comprised of professional and academic staff representing all seven Colleges, representatives of key service divisions, and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander student representatives. A draft version was also sent to all ANU staff, students and the Indigenous Alumni Network for comment. The final plan will be provided to ANU Council for endorsement and submitted to Reconciliation Australia for approval.

The organisation of the University resembles a federalist structure which is used as a framework for the implementation of this document. The RAP Plan is intended to set a benchmark for initiatives that are to be implemented at a University-wide level and to create a holistic approach to advancing reconciliation. It informs all Implementation Plans that follow it at College and Division levels while permitting them the flexibility to be creative in actions that are especially adapted to those units. The RAP signals an ambitious systemic shift in the University’s culture and its engagement with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. The University recognises the importance of reconciliation for all members of our University and that initiatives to promote reconciliation must be framed within a respectful environment for all.
Opportunities

The University aspires to enrol Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students and employ Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff in proportion to the number of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Australians in the overall population. To do so, we will focus on providing a culturally appropriate, stimulating, enriching and supportive environment to study and work.

Respect:
The knowledge, cultural expression and lived experiences of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Australians should be acknowledged and celebrated by all in our community. The perspectives which Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples bring to intellectual inquiry enable them to make valuable and unique contributions to the University’s research and educational programs and the generation of new knowledge. Respecting and valuing these knowledges, cultures and experiences is therefore fundamental to the business of the University and its goals in relation to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander education, research and employment.

4. Increase staff and student understanding, valuing and recognition of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures, histories, knowledge and rights through cultural learning in our education and research programmes.
